

September 19, 1950.

Dear Roger:

Well, we're finally home, after a fast trip across the country without incident, and a long week of meetings at Columbus. But our car waited until yesterday to fall apart, with some carburetor trouble.

You're welcome to the ONPG, which I trust you did locate. As to the UV, it is perfectly possible that some cells entirely fail to adapt, but the proportion of these is relatively high compared to those which adapt more slowly. One could juggle these two parameters so as to fit the data. I still think it would be interesting to determine the effects of partial preadaptation. Thanks for sending A3.12 which has arrived in apparently good condition. Quin is also settled in a more or less satisfactory apartment. He is looking forward to a visit from you with great trepidation, as he claims he will have to prepare a dinner. I have not yet seen Lardy but will do so promptly.

Sincerely,
